PARKE County

Final marker

This stone marks the site which Jon and Mary Nurnberger were buried in the early days of the twentieth century. These two people were the last to be buried at the site near Numa, located in southwest Parke county.

Old Numa cemetery damaged by vandals

Daily Kentonian 3-19-79

by Dennis Marietta

Located in southwest Parke county, there is a cemetery hidden back in some woods near the Wabash river. Many people in the area know about its existence, but few know any of the details surrounding it. That is, except for Mrs. Kathleen Seybold.

"It was called the Numa cemetery," Mrs. Seybold said, "and some of my relatives are buried there."

The cemetery has fallen into the hands of vandals as of late, and many of the tombstones, several of them dating back to pre-civil war days, have been destroyed.

The plot of land sits on property owned by Ina Nevins, rural Rosedale, but according to Mr. Nevins, other than knowing it exists, he does not have any other information on it. "It's an old, old cemetery," Nevins said, "and all of the land around here used to belong to the Walker family, but I don't know much about it."

Mrs. Seybold's great-grandparents are buried there, and her grandparents, John and Mary Nurnberger, were the last folks to be laid to rest at this old site.

"It was a public cemetery, and my grandfather was the last person to be buried there," Mrs. Seybold said.

There is no record of the cemetery in the Parke County records, although, according to Doris Catlin of the Parke County recorder's office, back in the WPA days, a record was made of all the cemeteries in the county, and she would have to take time to go back and check in these old records, which she has agreed to do.

Although little is known about the site, the fact remains that there is a cemetery there, and approximately 15-20 of the area's first residents, were laid to rest in a small tract of land hidden away in some woods near the river.

[-----] information in brackets not from tombstones

(-----) name in parenthesis is maiden name and in some cases is the surname by a previous marriage

— — — letters or words underlined indicates printing or engraving on stone not legible or hard to read and not sure of correctness of any underlined information because of chipped, broken or badly worn stone.

Fraternal organizations indicated on stones are listed either by full name, standard abbreviations or by a drawing of the emblem as indicated on stone

Rows are listed East to West, rows in depressed area formed by the cement retaining wall are listed as Rows 10a thru 10d.
 Stones in the rows are listed South to North.
 Cemetery is in excellent well-kept condition.
